He Orders a Suit of Clothes From the Postmaster General

And Refers Accidentally to a Postoffice, Hoping that the P. M. G. Will Appeal to the President -- Local New York News .- One Self Made Man Frankly Writes to Another.

Written for the PLAIS DEALER. ST. PATRICK'S DAY, IN THE GRAY OF EARLY MORNING.

Gen. J. Wanamaker, Washington, D. C. Dear Sir:

I called at your generas between man and man in regard to a new ready made suit of home, but in Washington D. C.

Hence I write to you in regard to the matter, instead of dealing Lorderel a suit, if you remempostmaster at Laramie City, Wy. T. I was in the department there and gave satisfaction. Peeple write me yet that they have never experienced such an era of prostration since the town was laid out as they did when I was at the helm of the postoffice there. The suit was a plain business suit, dowered with a wild and wealthy profusion of pockets, many of which I did not at that time really need. It was a cutaway coat with horn buttons and long princess trousers of the same, held held in place by means of elastic suspenders in pigeon breast shades with heliotrape buttons on them.

I wore this suit through my entire administration, also through the places where it came most in I now apply to you once more for a suit that shall be plain and dur- be jumped on and booted and trod able and plain and yet fix the eye of a stranger at once and compell him to say "There is a thorough office for payment. My home is not far from the postoffice in New York and I pay gaxes there. I also have writing to do for the World newspaper, which is directly across the street.
